Jelly fish don't feel pain in the pain some way that human would. They don't possess a brain, heart, bones or a respiratory system. They have 95% water & contain only a basic network of neurons that allow them to sense their environment.

Turritopsis dohrnii, the so called "Immortal Jellyfish" can hit the reset button and revert to an earlier developmental stage if it is injured or otherwise threatened. Instead of dying it shrinks in on itself, reabsorbing its tentacles & losing the ability to swim. It then settles on the seafloor as a blob-like cyst. It can also clone itself. If you cut a jellyfish in half, the piece of the Jellyfish can regenerate and turn into two new jellies.
